History

Prior to 1994, there was not a social service agency in Frisco to help families in crisis. Those in need, including many without dependable transportation, had to travel to Dallas or McKinney for any time of aid. A small group of concerned citizens initiated Frisco's Project for the Future to address this growing community need.

Initially, the agency offered food and clothing to those in need. Over the years, the agency has expanded its programs and services to meet the growing needs of those less fortunate. To date, Frisco Family Services is still the only non-profit agency in Frisco that provides emergency assistance for low-income households. With a highly-skilled professional staff, Frisco Family Services has established partnerships throughout the city and North Texas and works tirelessly to make a positive difference in the lives of those in need.
